Kelsey Museum of Archaeology

The Kelsey Museum is the brainchild of Francis W. Kelsey, Professor of Latin at the University of Michigan from 1889 to 1927. Kelsey pursued an active program of collecting antiquities for use in teaching, and launched the first university-sponsored archaeological excavations in the Mediterranean and Near Eastern regions in 1924. Most of the artifacts in the Kelsey Museum come from excavations carried out in Egypt and Iraq in the 1920s and 1930s. In 1928, shortly after Kelsey's death, the Museum of Classical Archaeology was installed in Newberry Hall on State Street. It was renamed in honor of Professor Kelsey in 1953, and enlarged with the construction of the William Upjohn Exhibit Wing in 2009. In addition to conserving and exhibiting its collections, the Museum still sponsors field projects in countries around the Mediterranean (although the artifacts recovered in those excavations now all remain in their countries of origin), and it plays a vital role in undergraduate and graduate teaching and research.

University of Michigan Museum of Art

One of the finest university museums in the country, UMMA holds collections representing over 150 years of art collecting at the University, while its dynamic schedule of special exhibitions and interpretative programs connects visitors with the rich artistic legacy of the past and today's avant-garde. In 2009, UMMA opened a landmark addition, named the Maxine and Stuart Frankel and the Frankel Family Wing for its lead benefactors, and a major restoration of its historic Beaux-Arts home, Alumni Memorial Hall. Thanks to this major transformation, UMMA not only more than doubled the space available for collections display, temporary exhibitions, programs and educational exploration, but also fulfilled the Museum's mission to bridge visual art and contemporary culture, scholarship and accessibility, tradition and innovation.

ACP Grant Fund – Donations Welcome

Each year the ACP provides a number of grants to fund low-fee analyses provided by our members.

The number of grants we can fund and the amount we can give depend on donations from our members and a few private individuals who have been touched by psychoanalysis in some way. The ACP would like to thank the Todd Ouida Foundation, the Anna Freud Foundation and our ACP members for their generous donations this year.

These Grants, enrich our child analytic community by supporting the analyses of children in need. Please consider including a donation to our valuable program when you send in your dues or contact the ACP office at (512) 261-3422.

Call for Papers

The ACP Program Committee invites workshop proposals for the 2018 and 2019 Annual Meeting.

The Committee invites papers that describe in-depth analytic work with children and adolescents. The theme for the conferences has not yet been determined, so at this point we welcome all proposals that demonstrate an in-depth, engaged analytic process. Proposals should be at least three to five double-spaced pages and include one or two detailed examples of the analytic process and a brief dynamic case formulation.

The review by the Committee is a blind, i.e., anonymous, process. For this reason, please be sure that your proposal does not include any information that would identify you, including your city or state. Please attach a signed cover letter that lets us know whether or not the paper has been or will be presented in any other venues, i.e., presentations or publications, and specifies those venues. In addition, please indicate whether you would be willing to present this paper at the 2018 conference May 4-6 in Santa Fe, New Mexico, or the 2019 conference, to be decided, or at either conference. Proposals should be sent to Ms. Janet Blomquist at childanalysis65@gmail.com.

If you have questions, please contact Denia Barrett at deniabarrett@gmail.com or (216) 849-8858, or Sydney Anderson at sydney-anderson@comcast.net or (812) 331-2800.

Confidentiality

We are privileged each year to come together to hear detailed case material and to talk openly with colleagues about the work we share, yet often carry out in isolation. In a group such as ours, it goes without saying that what we hear in any of the clinical meetings and discussions is also privileged. It never hurts, however, to restate our commitment to respecting the confidentiality of the clinical material that is the basis for our mutual learning here at our scientific meeting. We are grateful to the presenters for entrusting us with their work.

ACP Leadership Roles

The Nominating Committee of the ACP invite all ACP members to contact us if you have an interest in serving in a leadership role on our Executive Committee. Equally, we welcome suggestions about colleagues that you think might have or you think are qualified to have an interest!

The Executive Committee is responsible for the academic and fiscal health of our organization, through the development of programs and outreach, and through encouraging dialogue about the ways we think and work in our roles as child analysts. Positions such as Councilor, Candidate-councilor, and Officers of the Board are elected through a formal nominating process, for which we welcome self-nominations. Membership on one or more of the numerous committees of the Board are another way to serve our organization.

If you are interested in learning more about the opportunities available to serving our organization, please contact Adele Kaufman, LCSW at adelekaufman@comcast.net or (847) 432-7585 or Susan Sherkow, MD at spsherkow@gmail.com or (212) 717-0099.
